FINAL RESULTS OF RIFLE AND PISTOL COMPETITIONS

The final results of the annual rifle and pistol competitions held during the latter part of May are given below. The names appearing in the list of medals in the pistol competitions have caused some surprise and some have expressed a doubt as to the correctness of the reports heretofore published on the ground that so many of the names appearing as pistol shots are very well known rifle shots. It must be remembered that the rules for the national matches this year provide that at least five members of a competing team shall have never fired in a national match previously, and that no member shall have fired in any of the last three matches. In view of this rule many of the best known riflemen of the Corps are barred from competition on the Marine Team at the National Matches and are therefore devoting their attention to a mastery of the pistol.

BITS OF MUD FROM QUANTICO

By Russ

Hudson was the star of the snappy ten-inning game won by the Post Team from the Garfields last Sunday. He not only smashed out the hit which won the game, a smashing drive through right field for the circuit, but played a noteworthy game at first base, making several difficult stops. The whole team displayed more pep in this game than at any other time during the season.

Admiral Pakenham of the Royal English Navy, expressed himself as being as greatly impressed by the singing of the marines at Quantico as by anything he saw or heard there. He remarked that he would not be satisfied until every ship in the British Navy has a crew which can sing as the Quantico Marines do.

Loads of spirit is in evidence at the Second Division Reunion, present and former "Indians" joining together to make their reunion a memorable event. General Lejeune was given an ovation that will be remembered as long as Quantico remains a camp when he stepped on the large platform in the stadium to address the assembled veterans.

The dance given in the stadium was probably the largest and most successful ever given here. The open air dancing space was more beautiful than any hall could have been, the great natural beauty of the surrounding hills being added to by the numerous strings of Japanese lanterns which threw a pleasant glow over the dancers.

A horse, 51 years old, is living at Catawissa, Pennsylvania. He is the property of a minister who has owned him for 35 years. The horse is believed to be the oldest in existence.

Sgt. Unger, at Post Headquarters, Quantico, Va., our representative.

Sonnet of a Sapp

I love to idly tread the primrose path,
To go the limit when I toss the dice,
To greet my conscience with a merry
laugh,
And to forget that I must pay the price.
I do not care to keep my record clear,
My motto every day is "I don't care";
There's not a single virtue I hold dear, There's not a soul who I'd trust anywhere.
I spend my time in useless idleness,
The only time I work is when I must;
I'm bound to take things easy, I confess, Until my bones are crumbling in the dust.
So mark me down for just a worthless
chap
Who knows he is a Dumbell and a Sapp.

The Kid was Clever

The Marine and his best girl were seeing the sights of New York. The temptation to steal a kiss was strong, but he knew that people do not stop to kiss on the street in broad daylight, even if it is one of those rare occasions when a Marine has a chance to parade Broadway with his lady friend.

Suddenly the Leatherneck had a bright idea. He knew it looked all right to kiss a person good-bye on the street.

"Lissen, Lucille," he suggested. "What do you say if we shake hands, kiss each other good-bye then walk around opposite blocks and meet again?"

"You're on," said his lady love.

The scheme turned out to be such a success that several blocks were negotiated in the same manner, and the entire trip up town was a series of meetings and partings.

Now the Leatherneck is wondering why he was so dumb he never thought of it before.

A Highbrow Study

An M. C. I. lad said, "I'm pining
To take up the study of mining.
I'm engaged to a lass
Who is very high class,
And mining is very refining."

The Sea-Bag Speaks

I am a Sea-Bag.

It is well that I am made of stout canvas with reinforced seams, for I have had many a jolt while accompanying my master, a U. S. Marine, on his journeys about the world.

I first saw the light in the Q. M. Department about five years ago.

I was issued to my master who soon had my sides bulging with shoes, underclothing, uniforms and the odds and ends of things a Marine uses or gathers on his travels.

My earliest recollection is of a long sea2 voyage. For days I lay in the musty hold of a vessel, tossing from side to side as she rolled in the waves.

It seemed ages before the Marine swung me across his shoulders and carried me to a barracks situated under the palm trees in some tropical isle.

I was quartered behind his bunk for months and listened to many a strange tale told by some Soldier of the Sea.
Occasionally the Marine would rummage in my roomy depths for some article of clothing, or would stow something he he had discarded for the moment.

Then we both shoved off. Again I made a long sea voyage. How many months it lasted I couldn't tell, but it seemed ages to me, shut off from the bright sunlight.

Fully four years I jaunted around, travelling to the uttermost ends of the earth, but finally the Marine lugged me aboard a train and took me to his home in the Middle West.

Today as I lay in the shadowy attic
the Marine visited me. He looked over my contents and examined a little paper which he seems to prize very highly.

He was restless. His mind seemed to be far awav, and he was thinking no doubt of the deep blue sea, the fronded palms of the tropics, and the buddies he had left behind.

I feel that he is going to ship over again. And I am glad. For like my master I can never again be content with the dull life of a sleepy little town.

Now I am counting the hours before we embark on new adventures together.

It's a Man's Game

You can sell goods at a counter
If you're wabby in the knees;
You don't need brawn and muscle
If you're only selling cheese.

You can still work in an office
If your eyes are nearly blind;
There are lots of occupations
That a sickly lad can find.

Though you're rather hard of hearing
You can get work if you try;
Lots of lads are weak and puny,
Yet, somehow they're getting by.

But I'll tell you one thing, Buddy,
Just deny it if you can—
If you're going to be a Leatherneck
YOU'VE GOT TO BE A MAN.

The Trail of Casabianca

CHAPTER III

Synopsis: Fifi Flapperino, the admirer of Devil Dog Dave, has been captured by the voodoo worshippers. Dave was rescued from the Caribbean, only to discover he had fallen afoul of a gang of rebels smuggling arms into Haiti. Worst of all, aboard the rebel craft is Casabianca, the dreaded bandit. Now go on with the story—

Dave shuddered. Weakened by his long swim and struggle with the shark he was no match for the rebels who overpowered him. He was thrown roughly to the deck. Casabianca stood over him and muttered vile imprecations against him and the "accursed Americans."

Suddenly a dark cloud appeared on the horizon. A squall bore down on the tiny craft and almost capsized it. In a moment all was confusion. Orders were shouted. The "spicks" attempted to shorten sail.

Dave was forgotten. All hands ran about, tossing the contraband firearms overboard in an attempt to lighten the craft. The pilot swung the tiller hard aport. To lighten the vessel was the rebels' only hope.

Casabianca's dusky face paled at the thought of the danger ahead. His only thought now was to save his own worthless hide.

And now the vessel bore swiftly down upon the jagged reefs of coral that lined the shore. Only a miracle could save it from destruction.

Towering waves swept the vessel from stem to stern. Nearer and nearer to the rock-ribbed shore line the vessel drew.
Each succeeding wave tossed the flimsy vessel like a cork . . . it was no longer under the control of the pilot.

A giant wave bore the craft aloft and tossed it heedlessly on a coral reef. There was a deafening crash . . . the noise of splintering wood . . .
the hoarse shouts of the terror-stricken bandits, caught like rats in a trap.

For the fraction of a second Dave wished he had his old billet of telephone orderly in Brooklyn.

The mast went over the side. Dave was lifted to the crest of a wave . . .
then he slipped down, down into the swirling vortex of the rushing waters.

For a moment he thought he was lost.

FLAG DAY

On June 14th we celebrate the one hundred and forty-fifth birthday of our flag. In the midst of the struggle for independence our national banner was born, a symbol of liberty, justice and equality, its thirteen original stars forming, in the words of the resolution adopting it, "a new constellation," and shedding their rays over a new nation whose foundation was liberty.

It is a beautiful flag; how beautiful only one who sees it flying from the masthead of a ship in a strange and foreign port, or who glimpses it as he returns from a lengthy trip abroad, can appreciate. Yet it is not for its beauty that we honor it and love it.

The flag stands for all that contributed to make the nation what it is today. The sufferings of those who died to give this nation birth and dying left a heritage of freedom to their sons; the perils and privations of the hardy pioneers who gave their whole lives to the battle with the wilderness, whose unknown graves are marked by cities, and whose monuments are states; the woes of those who gave their all to preserve this nation "one and inseparable"; the great leaders who have sprung from a people reared in democracy; all these pass before us as we gaze upon the streaming folds of the starry banner which floats triumphantly over the nation. In reverencing it we reverence them. In honoring it we honor those to whom we owe our national existence.

BELLEAU WOOD

Tuesday, June 6, was the anniversary of the Battle of Belleau Wood, the engagement in which the Marine Brigade of the Second Division maintained the traditions of the Corps and established before the world that the glorious reputation built up by generations of wearers of our emblem is in safe keeping in the hands of the Marine of our day.

Many of our comrades lost their lives in the bullet-swept wheat fields or the tangled undergrowth of the forest, and many others carry grievous reminders of the day on which the advancing Prussian wave broke upon the rock of Marine resistance. It is right and proper that upon the anniversary of this day we should pause to do these honor. It is right that we should think with sadness of those who are no longer with us, but is also right that we should above all rejoice that our land still breeds men worthy of the glory which attends those who show in their lives the spirit of our motto, "Semper Fidelis."

France honored the Marines who fought so well on that day by renaming Belleau Wood, "Wood of the Marine Brigade," we may honor them by keeping their deeds in memory and permitting no spot, however small, to dull the brightness of the fame of the Corps they served so well.

NOVEL CELEBRATION OF BELLEAU WOOD DAY

The Southern Recruiting Division of the Marine Corps with Headquarters at Atlanta, Ga., chose a novel means of celebrating June 6, or Belleau Wood Day, a day famous in Marine history as marking the meeting of the Leatherneck and the Prussian Guard in the shadows of Belleau Wood and the victory of the Marine.

An interesting program was broadcasted by radio-telephone from the Journal radio station at Atlanta. Though the radio is coming into use for all purposes this is the first instance of its use by recruiters and one of the first attempts to spread the details of a celebration of national interest throughout the country.

The program which was broadcasted consisted of the following numbers:

MARINES BEAT GARFIELDS

The Garfield A. C. of Washington, D. C., last Sunday fell before the Quantico Marines by a 2-to-1 score in ten innings. A pair of homers were responsible for the Marines' victory. The Garfields were leading until the eighth when Odam tied the score with a circuit drive into left. In the tenth Hudson settled matters, collecting his first hit in seventeen games, driving the ball into deep left where it rolled along the sun baked surface while he rounded the bases.

ENGLISH MARINES ENTERTAINED AT WASHINGTON BARRACKS

Last Saturday evening the Marines of the Marine Barracks, Washington, D. C., entertained the Royal Marines from H. M. S. Raleigh, then at the Washington Navy Yard, at a dinner and dance at the barracks.

One of the best meals ever served at any post was prepared by First Cook Hungler and Second Cook Lape under the direction of Sergeant Hirsch. The mess hall was tastefully decorated with ferns and other plants and American and English flags.

The dance which followed the dinner was one of the most successful ever given at the Barracks. The Band Hall was elaborately decorated with streamers and bunting, a false ceiling being constructed of colored paper streamers. Punch, candy, favors and cigarettes were on hand during the entire evening and delicious refreshments were served during the intermission.

The British Marines and Bluejackets who attended declared the evening to be the most pleasant they had experienced in this country.

ADMIRAL PAKENHAM ATTENDS SECOND DIVISION DINNER

Admiral Sir William C. Pakenham and the officers of the H. M. S. Raleigh lent a real tinge of the old times to the annual Second Division dinner held at Quantico, Tuesday evening, June 6, when they were seated as guests of honor with the some five hundred odd officers and men who were members of the famous Second Division.

Following the dinner the guests of honor and the veterans of the Second witnessed an entertainment by the Marine Corps Theatrical Troupe of the Quantico Post.

Tuesday was the first day of the three days' annual reunion of the Second Division which is being held this year at the Marine Barracks, Quantico, Virginia.

A good program of events was carried out for the edification of the visiting veterans under the supervision of Brigadier General Smedley D. Butler, in command of the post.

Another feature of the program for Tuesday was the review of the Fifth Regiment of Marines at the post for Admiral Pakenham and the men of the Second. Admiral Pakenham was strong in his praise of the soldierly appearance and discipline of the Marines and complimented them highly.

The dinner which was held in the open in the huge athletic stadium was arranged by the Sixth Regiment. Music was furnished by two orchestras from the Post Band and the Post Band.

MARINE BAND GIVES BENEFIT CONCERT

As a means to help swell the fund for the Belleau Wood Memorial, the Marine Band on June 6, gave a concert at Dean Place in Washington, D. C. While June 6 was the anniversary of that memorable day when the Marines cleared Belleau Wood of enemy troops in 1918 nothing was indicative of the late conflict except the little red, white, and blue buttons that were worn by the contributors to the fund that will rebuild the village of Belleau in France as a lasting memorial to the Marines and the Second Division.

FORMER MARINE DIES

Sergeant Major Edward Dunn, U. S. Marine Corps, Retired, died at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Washington, D. C., June 5, 1922, as the result of a fall which caused the fracture of his right hip.

Sergeant Major Dunn was born at Philadelphia, Pa., September 23, 1836, and first enlisted in the Corps at Philadelphia, November 23, 1850, at the age of fourteen years and served continuously in the Corps until May 15, 1886, when he was placed on the retired list of enlisted men of the Marine Corps, with the rank of Sergeant Major.

He was appointed a Sergeant in 1860 and a Sergeant Major in 1864, holding the latter rank until the date of his retirement.

Sergeant Major Dunn had the distinction of being the one and only Sergeant Major of the Corps during the whole of the time he held that rank.

After being retired from the Marine Corps with over thirty years' active service, Sergeant Major Dunn held a position under the Government in the Washington Navy Yard until early in 1920, thus making a record of over 69 straight years' service under the United States Government.

The funeral will be held from the Knights of Pythias Temple, 1012 Ninth St. N. W., Washington, D. C., at 3 p. m., June 8, 1922, interment being in the Congressional Cemetery.

His widow resides at 512 Eighth Street S. E., Washington, D. C.

What Will You Be Doing One Year From Today?

Three hundred and sixty-five days from now—what?

Will you still be struggling along in the same old job at the same old salary—worried about the future—never quite able to make both ends meet—standing still while other men go ahead?

One year from today will you still be putting off your start toward success—thrilled with ambition one moment and then cold the next—delaying, waiting, fiddling away the precious hours that will never come again?

Don't do it, man—don't do it.

There is no greater tragedy in the world than that of a man who stays in the rut all his life, when with just a little effort he could bring large success within his grasp.

Make up your mind today that you're going to train yourself to do some one thing well. Choose the work you like best in the list below, mark an X beside it, mail the coupon to Scranton, and we will send you, without cost or obligation, the full story of what the I.C.S. can do for you.

Right now you can decide where you will be in 1923.

Common sense will tell you that it is far better to send in this Success Coupon today than to wait another precious year and then wish you had!
